

For a movement of solidarity from the neighbourhoods!

10 points for a more just society

We fight for a society

1. without poverty, where all people have access to dignified, well-paid work and are respectfully supported as unemployed. In which we decide together what we work and how we work.
2. in which all people are regarded and treated equally, regardless of origin, language, gender, sexual orientation, appearance and beliefs.
3. in which housing is affordable for all without eating up a large part of wages, and in which housing does not become a vehicle for profit.
4. where no one has to experience police violence and contempt from the authorities.
5. in which everyone together - not only women - takes care of our children, our old and sick people and of cooking and cleaning.
6. in which all people have access to free adequate health care and the health system does not run on profit.
7. where nature is respected and the next generation can live peacefully with nature.
8. in which access to an enriching education system is possible for all. An education that prepares children and young people for a better life and not only for the labour market.
9. in which all people have enough free time and opportunity to develop for themselves and together and are not always subject to the pressures of work, competition and lack of time.
10. in which people have a direct say in the economy and politics.

FOR THIS

we must fight together. We want an organised neighbourhood movement that builds power from below. A movement of many neighbourhoods fighting together for a society of solidarity.
